An appropriation of $190,000 for this purpose has been approved by the School Board and the indorsement of a number of officials, including Mayor Ainside, has been secured.

Bloodhounds Too Late.

Arnold Elky, who runs a grocery store at 2000 Bainbridge Street, reported to the police of the Third Station yesterday that a large plate glass in the door of his place was smashed late Tuesday night. It is believed that it was done by one or several persons with the object of robbery. Mr. Elky heard a noise and went to investigate, but did not see anyone.

News of Petersburg

The Times-Dispatch Bureau, 5 Bellingbrook Street,

Petersburg, Va. January 7, 1914.

The Common Council held a lengthy session last night, considering various matters of interest and transacting routine business. Some time ago the Frances Bland Randolph Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, made request of the Council for permission to make excavations in old Blandford Church yard, to definitely locate, if possible the grave of the British General Phillips, who died in Petersburg in 1781. It was declared on the floor of the Council at the time, backed by the opinion of the City Attorney, that the Council had no legal authority to grant such permission. authority to grant such permission. The request, however, was referred to the Cemetery Committee for investigathe Cemetery Committee for investigation and report. The committee's report was read last night by Councilman W. P. McKendrey. In effect it says there is no authority under the law, either in the committee or in the Council, for the granting of any permission to dig in the church yard for the purpose, as proposed, of erecting a monument or marking. The committee, however, suggests that the Council would not interfere with or make any objection to the erecting of such monument or marker at such spot at or near which the remains of General publishes are supposed to be buried. opening a savings account with this bank. It only takes one dollar to PERSONAL HONESTY expressed to-day by officials of the Treasury Department that collections from the income tax will not aggregate the total esti-mated when the tarin bill was enacted This fear is based upon the known indisposition of the individual voluntarily to pay taxes when they can be evaded. The department has decided that collections of the income tax at the source may be made only when there exists at the source property of such value as to bring it above the exemptions provided by the law. Under such a ruling the element of personal honsuch a runing the element of personal homesty is an important factor in aiding the officials to collect the tax that is assessed. If a person has with a broker $3,000 of bonds for the collection of interest coupons, the bank will not be required to deduct the tax on that amount of bonds, because they do not constitute an aggregate amount in excess of the $3,000 exemption should the owner be unmarried. Manifestly, it will be impossible for the internal revenue officials to ascertain whether this particular individual has similar small amounts of taxable securities on deposit elsewhere, and it is doubted by officials if the small owner will come forward with information unless compelled to do so through the discoveries of revenue agents.

"It will be a comparatively easy matter," said a prominent Treasury official to-day, "to disclose the holdings of wealthy men through the reports of their bankers and brokers where their securities are deposited. The case will be quite different with respect to small holders who keep their few securities in a safe deposit vauit and bring them out only to collect the quarterly interest. Of course, the efflictors are guided greatly by the financial standing of men of wealth, but there is no guide to the vast army of small investors who have laid their savings away.
